CELEBREZZE, DUNCAN & O'NEILL PRESIDE OVER MOOT COURT NIGHT

By David Ross Jones

A standing room only crowd witnessed a proud moment in the College of Law's history on Saturday, October 30th. The occasion—The Third Annual Moot Court Night. A most distinguished panel established the importance of the evening. Presiding judges were, The Honorable Anthony J. Celebrezze of the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, the Honorable Robert M. Duncan, Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio and Judge Designate to the United States Court of Military Appeals and the Honorable C. William O'Neill, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio.

Prior to the Court proceedings a dinner was hosted by the Moot Court and Henn presented the best argument as a unit. Dean Christensen presented Mr. Lowe with a $100 check in recognition of his high achievement. President Enarson awarded the Respondent the Hugo L. Black Advocacy Award. Thomas Baechle, Bruce Elfvin, Robert Henn, David Jones and Richard Sutter were presented with Moot Court Board Certificates by Professor Ruben. Team Certificates went to Thomas Begle, Avery Friedman, Joseph Gallo, John Gannon, Alan Hirth, Barbara Kaye, James Lowe, Charles Mathay, Terry Saron and Peter Zawaly.

A reception followed outside the courtroom, where many past Moot Court Team members recounted their involvement with Moot Court. No activity at the Law School generates the intense excitement and enthusiasm of Moot Court; the continued interest and devotion of past advocates being evidence of this.

On November 5 at 8:30 p.m. the Team will present a second round of arguments to another distinguished panel. Present will be Professor Charles Auerbach of the Law School; the Honorable Frank J. Battisti, Chief Judge of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Ohio; and the Honorable Jack Grant Day of the Court of Appeals of Cuyhoga County. All are welcome and encouraged to attend.

This will be one of the final open rounds prior to the November 19th and 20th Regional Arguments of the National Competition.

Team and Professor Alan Miles Ruben, Faculty Advisor, celebrating the occasion and honoring the prestigious panel. Members of the faculty and administration were in attendance. Special university guests were President and Mrs. Enarson and Dean Christensen.

The court proceedings began at approximately 8:30 p.m. The hard work and thorough preparation by the Team was put to the test. The result was an absorbing and informative series of arguments. The advocates for Petitioner were Messrs. Thomas Baechle, Alan Hirth and Thomas Begle (Assisting Counsel). Counsel for Respondent were Messrs. Bruce Elfvin and James Lowe with Robert Henn assisting. The case arose out of circumstances paralleling the My Lai incident.

The panel made two determinations. Chief Justice O'Neill announced the findings. They were: James Lowe was the outstanding advocate of the evening and the Respondent Team of Elfvin, Lowe,

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

A bold and new approach in unifying health and social services has been introduced recently as the United Torch Drive in the Greater Cleveland area. The Drive, a combination of the old United Appeal, cancer drive and Health Fund is a comprehensive reordering of community services to be directed by a more representative portion of the community.

For law students and lawyers, support of the United Torch Drive, which has a goal of $22.4 million, represents an exercise of professional responsibility towards its community. Among the agencies supported by the United Torch Drive are the Legal Aid Society and Cleveland Chapter on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse, the Council on Crime and Delinquency, and some funds going to the Legal Aid and Defender Association. In addition to these law related services, the United Torch Drive supports many vital health and service agencies not related to law which will depend heavily upon the voluntary giving of our community. Among the new health services are the arthritis, cystic fibrosis, diabetes, hemophilia and kidney foundations. With the inclusion of health and cancer research, the United Torch Drive becomes a unique and totally inclusive community effort.

The United Torch Drive needs the support of not only Cleveland's law students, but of all Greater Cleveland. Give at your place of business, through the university, or directly to the Torch Drive, 3100 Euclid Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

MOOT COURT, BEST YET

Fear, nervousness, reservations and rigid form were very apparent at C.S.U. College of Law third annual Moot Court night. The usual mental preparations were made before the panel arrived. As the judges entered, all eyes turned from the center of the room to the bench. Then Chief Justice O'Neill nodded to the team to begin the arguments.

Tom Baechle approached the bench composed of the most prestigious members of the Ohio judicial system. Tom had the hardest job of the four advocates. His fifteen minute presentation peeled the layers of pressure off the team as a whole. Each member of the Moot Court team that followed Tom became less reserved, more confident.

When Jim Lowe began his presentation the courtroom came to life through his flowing presentation of courage and aggression.

The last two advocates, Bruce Elfvin and Alan Hirth, presented a paragon of oral argument. Their presentation exhibited how a well planned attack unveils the flexibility needed to answer the judges' questions and then proceed on the point of law being made. Unfortunately, maybe a little frustration, a small amount of personal aggression became apparent at this stage of the hearing. But hard hitting advocacy in defense of a rule of law or a client should be admired.

Overall, each advocate exemplified the necessary and copious characteristics which will carry our school into the National Moot Court competition. Positively the greatest honor to Cleveland State was stated by Justice Duncan in his summation. He believes that this Moot Court team mirrors the necessary characteristics to argue before the highest court in the land.

Indeed, their performance was outstanding. Our Moot Court team is sure to have the greatest success in the national competitions.

The students, faculty, and administration of C.S.U. and the law school must be congratulated. They have molded a team that is the best this school has ever seen. But more important they have shrouded the team with confidence. We all have shown that Cleveland State University Cleveland-Marshall College of Law is more aware, more conscious, and more involved. In the words of Justice Duncan, "That's the name of the game."

LEGISLATURE

A Veterans Drug Treatment bill has passed the House of Representatives in Ohio. This legislation will provide drug treatment and rehabilitation programs at VA hospitals for servicemen and veterans suffering from drug abuse. The bill will expand the drug treatment center which opened at the Brecksville VA Hospital this summer.

IN

In addition, ex-servicemen who have become addicted in the Armed Forces will be eligible for treatment regardless of their type of discharge.

The importance of this provision was emphasized recently by the story of Edward B. Moran, a nineteen year old ex-GI from Brookpark, Ohio. Moran became addicted to heroin in the Army and was given an un-

It has been stated that behind the wheel of every 50th car is a drunk driver. (20-1 Gavel 3). This is true, but to be more exact: behind the wheel of every 25th car is a driver who is legally intoxicated. He is on our Ohio roads between 6 p.m. and 3 a.m. and he is lightning fast and deadly.

Mr. Douglas W. Toms of the Federal Traffic Safety Program told the National Association of Women Highway Safety Leaders that more than half of the 56,000 traffic deaths last year were directly caused by the drunk driver.

Again the Gavel must protest the inertness of our gait Ohio legislature, mainly the Senate, to pass Senate Bill No. 14. Their insensible caution is a detriment to every citizen in Ohio.

Senate Bill No. 14, which reduces the blood alcohol concentration percentage from .15 percent to .10 percent as the presumptive level of intoxication, must be passed now.

Let's make the necessary steps to deminish the deaths on our highways by 50 percent. It is imperative that we act immediately—Our lives are at stake.

desirable discharge last year. He was refused admittance to drug treatment programs at VA or military hospitals because of his discharge. Finally, after much publicity in The Plain Dealer, Moran was admitted to a private drug center.

Should this Veterans Drug Treatment bill become law former servicemen like Moran could be admitted to a VA treatment center. The bill now travels to the Senate.

Congressman James V. Stanton, former President of the Cleveland City Council, stated, "I believe drug treatment programs are in the public interest, and that the government has a responsibility not only to former GIs but also to protect society from drug users and addicts."

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER PROGRAMS

by Barry Laine

There are many opportunities open for 2nd year law students for 1972 summer law internships and clerkships.

For internships or clerkships with larger law firms & many Federal Government Agencies it is imperative that applications be made early in October or November.

For summer programs with law firms it is necessary that you forward a resume. Sample resume formats are available in the placement office.

Three of the larger law firms in Cleveland will interview 2nd year students at the school for summer programs. These are excellent programs and the pay is quite high, consequently competition is keen and the firms are highly selective. For appointments with one or more of these firms a student must turn in a resume to the placement office, then sign the appointment book. The law firms and dates for interviews were Jones, Day, Cockley & Reavis—Oct. 22, Squire, Sanders & Dempsey—Oct. 28, Baker, Hostetler & Patterson—Nov. 2.

For summer programs with Federal Agencies a Standard Form 171, (which can be obtained in the placement office) is usually a requirement.

Students can also apply for summer programs to 28 out of town law firms.

The placement office is available to assist students. Just drop in and arrange an appointment.

THE REAL WORLD

by Gary Pompan

There's an old joke that graduating law students don't even know where the Court House is. Well, the members of Professor Leroy Murad's Criminal Procedure Seminar not only know where the Court House is but they also know many of the men who work there. The seminar, offered this past summer, consisted of twice weekly discussions with prominent county judges, prosecutors, trial attorneys, policeman and the Assistant County Coroner.

Every law school in the country is faced with the dilemma of bringing in the practical and clinical aspects of the study of law, as opposed to the theoretical study. The question is how to accomplish this. Professor Murad has found one answer to this dilemma in this seminar. The guests who appeared provided insights and tips on how it really is when you practice in the courtroom. They discussed things that one can't learn from textbooks, but can only learn from years of practice and experience. They were open to all questions and comments.

The class was conducted in a semi-formal manner in which each participant spoke on one area of criminal law. Following these short talks, the floor was open to questions and discussion from the class. Professor Murad always provided time for the class members to meet the guests personally.

Judge John M. Manos, Cuyahoga County Court of Appeals, and Judges John V. Corrigan, Bernard Friedman, Frank J. Gorman, George J. McMonagel, Joseph P. Nahra, John T. Patton, Thomas J. Parrino, Leo M. Spellacy, and George W. White, all of the Cuyahoga County Court of Common Pleas, spoke about the entire criminal procedure from the time you get the client, to the point when the verdict is reached. They gave pointers as to what judges look for in criminal trials and what they think is proper conduct on the part of trial attorneys.

Criminal trial attorneys John Butler, Jerry Gold, Jerry Milano, James Willis, and Don DeRocco gave the procedure used in pretrial investigations and trial procedure from the defense attorney's position, which is to protect the rights of their client to the utmost.

George Frantz, a civil trial attorney, gave the procedure of a civil trial and showed the differences between civil and criminal trials.

Assistant County Prosecutors Hyman Friedman and William Coyne gave the trial procedure and approach to a case from the prosecutor's position, that of punishing the violators of the laws of our society. Clarence McLeod, Chairman of the Parole Board under Governor Michael V. DiSalle, described and gave an insight into the mechanics and operation of the Parole Board and parole procedure.

Assistant County Coroner Dr. Lester Adelson spoke about what the coroner's job involves. He went into detail on the importance of an autopsy and the many things which can be learned from one.

Lt. Richard Louth of the Rocky River Police Dept. talked about drunken driving and the use of the Breathalyzer test. Lt. Martin Lentz of the Cleveland Heights Police Dept., and an attorney, spoke about search and seizures and the use of a search warrant.

Judges John F. Corrigan and Walter G. Whitlatch of the Juvenile Court spoke on the Juvenile offender and Juvenile Court.

Professor Murad devoted much time and effort in arranging these seminars. Through his friendships with these outstanding men in the community, they gave up their valuable time to spend an evening with the classes. Each participant extended an invitation to all class members to visit with them anytime now or in the future.

The class showed their appreciation to these men by presenting them, through Professor Murad, with a certificate of appreciation to adorn their offices. Because of the success of this course and the value it has in the teaching of Criminal Procedure, Professor Murad has stated that he will present a proposal to the Curriculum Committee, that visits with these men be made a part of the Criminal Law class that he will teach this coming year.

GOSHIEN AND THE BRAMBLE BUSH

By MIKE SMITH

To be completely honest, we were all afraid. Not only was our first class in law school only minutes away, but we had learned through the grapevine that the infamous Professor Goshien ("The Baffler") was to lead us into the mysterious, puzzling and often painful world of contracts law. Most of us had never seen this man, but each student must have had a distinct mental picture of what he would be like. Approximately ten minutes before the class was scheduled to begin, a huge man lumbered into the room, taking his place upon the podium. Looking upward at him, Professor Goshien's physical appearance seemed to equal the reputation he had earned. As he spoke his first words, relating to house-keeping details and class procedure, it seemed quite possible that there would be no one left in June to do battle with his final. Our worst fears seemed to be borne out.

Ode to David Goshien

"I long have said there is no such thing as a hard case. I am frightened weekly but always when you walk up to the lion and lay hold the hide comes off and the same donkey of a question of law is underneath."

Oliver Wendell Holmes

First impressions are notoriously deceiving. Professor Goshien was not the imposing physical man he appeared to be. However, throughout the year, the work he required from us diminished not even slightly. "You will spend 20 hours a week on contracts" he barked at us the first day and those who remained 9 months later could not dispute his prediction. The final reward for this tedious study was much more than a passing grade from Goshien. It was an understanding of a field of law that is absolutely essential to a complete legal education. In the end his means

CONFLICTS OF LAW

"This course defies description!"

The residents of the "Briardale" public housing projects in Euclid are fighting to stop the demolition of their homes. In a complaint filed by the American Civil Liberties Union through volunteer cooperating attorney, Robert Kates, the residents charge that the City of Euclid approved legislation to tear down 288 family units (in order to "redevelop" the area) without holding a public hearing, and that action to tear down the remaining units is imminent.

The 800 public housing units which were built during World War II were sold in 1956 to the City of Euclid by the Office of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). Up until that date they were managed by the Cleveland Metropolitan Housing Authority (CMHA). The City of Euclid then executed a lease with the CMHA to have CMHA continue to operate, manage and maintain the housing project as they were required to do when under the jurisdiction of HUD.

CIVIL LIBERTIES ON TRIAL

By ALAN JAY ROM

The tenants say that in August, 1969, Euclid filed a proposed plan for "redevelopment" of the area without holding a public hearing to determine its desirability. In their place would be constructed 324 new luxury homes. This would mean the uprooting of many families, most of them with limited incomes, who would have no place to go. These families have been living there for many years, some since the homes were built, and because of very limited incomes, physical disabilities, the housing shortages-especially for poor people, etc. find it a hardship to relocate.

They charge that the homes have not been maintained by CMHA the way they were supposed to be, and that therefore the City of Euclid's arbitrary decision to tear them down because they were dilapidated is unreasonable, it being the ultimate responsibility of the City of Euclid to maintain them.

The demolition has already begun. A motion for a temporary restraining order was denied but the A.C.L.U. indicated that it may seek a preliminary injunction. On Friday evening, October 1st, a public meeting was held at the Recreation Center of "Briardale" which was attended by 350 residents. Eugene Bayer, Legal Committee Chairman of the A.C.L.U. and Robert Kates, the cooperating attorney, spoke with the residents concerning their rights. Overwhelming support was indicated that the tenants intend to stop the demolition of their homes.

ROSSEN HEADS C.L.E.

Legal education is taking a beneficial and modern turn for the better, beginning this year, and much of it may be attributed to Howard Rossen, chairman of the Continuing Legal Education Committee of the Cleveland Bar Association and graduate of Cleveland State Law School. According to Mr. Rossen, the purpose of the CLE Committee is to "oversee the various institutes put on by the Bar throughout the year." What makes this year different from all other years is that law students will now be able to have the full benefit of these institutes. Mr. Rossen is assuring all law students in the Cleveland area that for half price or less, they may participate in these institutes and reap the full benefits of the experience. The CLE Committee is overseeing six areas this year. These areas are a tax institute, a practice and procedure clinic, a criminal assignment workshop, an internal revenue tax workshop, a securities institute, and a luncheon lecture series which will span two months. Furthermore, seminars in small business practices, law office operations, trial practices, and updating the rules of civil procedure are now in the works. Most important, all of this is or will be offered to students as well as to area lawyers.

Professor Liz Moody and Assistant Dean Tabac, both of Cleveland State Law School, are actively working with Mr. Rossen in implementing an expanding program of clinical work in this law school and at Case Western Reserve College of Law. It is the hope of Mr. Rossen that clinical work will greatly replace the classroom method of teaching. It is hoped that with new techniques, clinical practice may finally "bridge the gap between the theory of law school and the realities of private practice." In addition to all of the above programs, Mr. Rossen has said that volunteer lawyers from the Cleveland Bar will be available to participate in a trial demonstration.

A typical program in the up-coming seminar program of the CLE Committee is the Practice and Procedure Clinic which will be of particular interest to final year students. Offered in the clinic will be the areas of domestic relations, probate, real estate, debtor-creditor, criminal law, business planning, and workman's compensation. All of this plus all of the written materials, which will be quite extensive, will be available. These programs, initiated by Howard Rossen when he took office in August, are now well under way.

Mr. Howard M. Rossen is a 1964 graduate of Cleveland State University Law School and is presently in the firm of Summers, Schneider, Burke, and Rossen. He may be best known as co-author of Smith's Review, Legal Gem Series, revised edition. Mr. Rossen is a member of the Ohio, District of Columbia, Florida, and U. S. Supreme Court Bars.

THE BAFFLER

were justified, and if at first the learning was painful, we ended up better because of it. There are no easy ways to master a subject such as contracts. Those who felt occasional study would be sufficient found themselves in perilous trouble at Thanksgiving, when the well-known "light in the turkey" was to appear. In fact, many are now nothing more than law-school statistics, a sad reminder that we all don't make it.

The task awarded Professor Goshien is simply this. Turn an undergraduate into a man who will someday have the title of attorney-at-law. Not much, you say. Well, Professor Goshien feels quite differently and justifiably so. For to become a lawyer, a man must learn (yes, learn) to think as one. The Goshien approach may at first be mistaken as hard and cruel, but it is designed to produce "good thinking" as he would growl. Good thinking is many things; it is not just what goes on in the head of a "barber or a bartender." This thought process he encourages each student to master consists of discovering what is relevant to the problem at hand and why it is so. He will insist first year students deal "with only the important matters and do so in a correct and competent manner, not the misleading, expressionless, ill-thought out and half-baked gibberish of an undergraduate." The questions which are spontaneous, which come off the top of one's head, are not welcomed by him. By June the undergraduate mind is transformed into the legal mind which a lawyer must rely on.

To achieve this goal the bramble bush method is used. Basically what happens is that in the first month the student is introduced to so many aspects of contract law that he cannot help but be completely confused. When this period of misunderstanding has reached its peak, the journey into the bramble bush is complete. The next step for each student will be to fight his way out, to undo the confusion, and this can only be achieved through individual effort. This period in the development of the legal-thinking process is likely to be one of the most uncomfortable portions of a student's life. To succeed in contracts, the student must shed the thorns of the bramble bush just as he must leave behind his undergraduate conceptions of the law. Professor Goshien is steadfast in his support of this teaching device. The student is, in effect, teaching himself the law of contracts which Goshien feels is the key to retaining the huge body of knowledge.

Professor Goshien has been involved with the Internal Revenue Service for several years. He advises this agency on national matters and has proposed changes in the various policies used. The Equal Opportunity Commission also has the benefit of Goshien's experience. There he deals primarily with race discrimination cases, but occasionally he will provide counsel for a sex discrimination case. Students are often invited to his home Friday evenings for "rap" sessions. Anything from contracts to the Cleveland Orchestra may be discussed. He considers these get-togethers as an excellent opportunity for his students to become better acquainted with Goshien the man, as opposed to his image of being an "all-business" contracts professor. He feels "students are colleagues" adding that the problems and pressures of his law school days have not been forgotten.

Professor Goshien radiates an overwhelming knowledge of his specialty as well as a love of teaching it. He walks into class with a thorough preparation of the hour's assignment and wastes no time in getting right down to business. To him, teaching contracts is a form of creativity where he can take "an undergraduate student who is ill-prepared for the culture-shock he is experiencing and lead him out of his former airs, false confidences, placidity, self-righteousness and conceit." He does not stress memorization, but rather skills in analysis. The stronger students will meet the challenges he offers them eagerly and without regret. The job of a contracts professor, he feels, is not only to help the student develop but also to assist the student in deciding whether law school is the road he really wants to follow. When asked what the secrets to a more successful law school are, he replied, "Good professors, selective choice of incoming students, active recruiting and a tradition to be proud of." Professor Goshien has already done a substantial job in helping our school establish such a tradition.
